The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 18.

Norwalk, June 7th, 1798.

ADDRESS,
To the PRESIDENT of the UNITED STATES.

SIR,

WE, the Bishop, Clergy, and lay Delegates, of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the State of Connecticut in Convention assembled, embrace this opportunity, of expressing our affectionate attachment to the laws and constituted authorities of the government, under which we live. Affairs of state, Sir, are never the subjects of our discussion; yet, at this important crisis, we do not consider it improper, to certify the Chief Magistrate of the United States, that we entertain a grateful sense of the numerous blessings, both civil and religious, which we enjoy. Whilst a desolating war rages among the nations of Europe, and daily threatens to involve us in all its calamities, we believe, Sir, that unity, under the gracious protection of heaven, will prove our strongest shield of defence. Impressed with the importance of this sentiment, we assure the rulers of our country, that we will use our best endeavors to promote unity of opinion, respect for the laws, and reverence for all that are in authority over us. And to our best endeavors, we add our prayers to Almighty God, "beseeching him so to direct and dispose the "hearts of all christian rulers, that they "may truly and impartially administer justice, to the punishment of wickedness and "vice, and to the maintenance of true religion and virtue."

ABRAHAM CONNECTICUT.
WILLIAM SMITH, sec'y of Convention.

ANSWER,
To the Bishop, Clergy and Lay Delegates of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the State of Connecticut.

GENTLEMEN,

I THANK you for this Address agreed on in convention assembled and presented to me by Mr. Hillhouse, one of your Senators in Congress.

Your affectionate attachment to the Laws and Constituted Authorities of the Government under which you live, is at once a demonstration of candor, moderation and liberality in yourselves and in those laws and authorities. Although affairs of State, as such, are never the subject of your discussion; yet it is impossible for you at such times to discuss the subject of your Church, without discussing those of the State, or to explain the duties of Men and Christians, without inculcating those of Citizens. It is not in your power to bestow a higher eulogium on the Government of your Country, than by this explicit acknowledgment of the grateful sense you entertain of the numerous blessings of civil and religious liberty, which ever enjoy them, and freely as you have received may you freely give.

Your endeavors to promote unity of opinion, respect for the laws, and reverence for all in authority, are in character; and your Prayers to Almighty God, beseeching him so to direct and dispose the hearts of all Christian Rulers, that they may truly and impartially administer justice to the punishment of Wickedness and Vice, and to the maintenance of true Religion and Virtue, I sincerely hope and believe will avail much.

JOHN ADAMS.
Philadelphia, July 6, 1798.

AMERICANS! (says the Centinel) Your country was never more in jeopardy than at the present moment;—and ye are supine and unsuspecting. The most treacherous, vindictive and active enemy you have, is in force, and on the march;—and your guards are scattered; and your sentinels asleep!

The insatiable Faction, which has been alert for years in the Northern States, now assumes a bolder tone!—mocks your wise laws; and defies your magistrates. The culprit now under punishment at Vergennes is styled a martyr;—his lies, issuing from his prison house, find circulaters, and believers;—Long Knives of Kentucky; the Whisky Boys, of the woods of Pennsylvania;—the Rebellion Pole Lads, of New-Jersey; and the United Irishmen of Virginia, and other Southern States, are all cock-a-top for moody insurrection, and confusion;—And you, Americans, breathe the fresh air, and gaze upon the sun, as though no danger was nigh, and your country was in the entire enjoyment of the smooth season, and the calms of life.

Invincible in integrity, and undismayed in the discharge of his important duties, as your PRESIDENT is, he yet needs the ample support of his countrymen! Will ye throw on him the entire burdens of your country; and not stretch forth a finger to ease them; shall WASHINGTON leave the tranquil abodes of Mount Vernon, and draw his sword in his declining years, unsupported and unassisted? If ye suffer it you may speedily commence the date of the prostration of YOUR NATIONAL INDEPENDENCE;—and bid adieu to your political existence, except as a fief of France,

PLAIN TRUTH.

Domestic Articles.

BOSTON, December 10.

Mr. Cobbett has just published General Marshal's answers to the questions of his Richmond friend; upon which he makes the following remarks: "The questions, with the answers thereto, are said to have been published at Richmond in a pamphlet. I first saw them when I was in the country. It was at the time when the woods began to exchange their lively green for the sickly yellow: apt emblem of the versatility of man."

Lyon, in his letter to Mason, speaks of a General Clark, a brother-in-law of his, and member of the Legislature. A correspondent wishes to know, if this is not the villain who has since been expelled the house of Representatives of Vermont, for fraudulent practices.

The Democrats say, they have honest men of their party. They have unquestionably a notorious set among the most active and leading members, who do not pass for honest. But if, however, any really well meaning persons have been deceived and misled, as to the integrity and wisdom of our present rulers, and who yet from pride stick to the wrong side, they are bound to think naturely, once more, of their conduct and principles, as also of the bad company they have fallen into. Conscience, if party has not seared it with a red-hot iron, ought to whisper sometimes in their ears. If we Democrats are not right, and it is at least possible we are not, we are very wrong indeed. We are then of all men the most criminal, the most pestilent; we are helping the French, we are hindering, as far as in us lies, the political salvation of our country, and conscience will whisper more last words. We may be wrong now, as we have been heretofore. Almost every thing we desired formerly, we no longer dare avow. Our censures of government have been so clearly disproved, that even Gallatin, Frenchman as he is, gives up the point, and justifies the conduct he had so much hand in rendering obnoxious. O Roxbury, who art rich from industry, and growing richer, and yet believest that our nation is oppressed and like to be enslaved; thou abundest with inhabitants of sense and merit, and yet bowest thy head before leaders who are a laughing stock. Verily it would be better for Sodom and Gomorrah, than for thee, if the days of tribulation, that thy rash town-meeting was called to hasten, should actually come to pass. Thou didst say, when the *General who is guiltless of shedding human blood, full of the terrors of war breathed into your bosoms his own heroic spirit; then when swell'd with all his valor, you resolved, and resolving didst say, it is better to be smitten than to smite again with the fist of wickedness; better to sneak and say our prayers to the French than to arm, better to lose our ships than to fire their guns against pirates, and better to turn quakers than become soldiers. [illegible] were armed they go nearly free and safe. Thus the wisdom of the conspicuous as its heroism did on the town-meeting day.

The event reminds us of a tongue valiant Stotch captain of militia, in 1747, who being sadly afraid to go into battle, called his soldiers to hear an harangue fit for the town meeting and its orator, and he so effectually painted the horrors of a battle, and the certainty of their going instantly to hell, if they were killed, as he believed the most of them would, that he found when he had finished, every brave fellow had run off, leaving the captain the excuse he wanted, to follow them. And thus the Democrats would leave ADAMS and WASHINGTON, Liberty and Property, a prey to the French.

A CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

JOHN A. SHAEFFER, of Philadelphia, who has for a few years past been in the southern States, has had the effrontery to draw several Bills of Exchange on Timothy Pickering, Esq. Secretary of State, and myself, and by that means has defrauded a number of persons of their money, deceiving them by an exhibition of letters and papers with the names affixed of divers public characters and reputable merchants highly recommendatory of said Shaeffer; to one of these papers I find my name subscribed, but I do not know the man; these are villainous forgeries! To prevent further imposition, I have to request the printers of Newspapers in the United States to publish this for the benefit of their fellow-citizens. SAMUEL MERRIDITH,

Treasurer of the United States.

PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 18.

The towering views of Gallic ambition which acquired a new ſtimulus to further daring from every added ſucceſs, have at length been completely cruſhed under the weight of her moſt hated foe; and from thoſe dreams of univerſal dominion with which this nation of philoſophers were ſo long amuſed, they wake to ignominy and ſhame. Their national glory ſunk forever, and the vital eſſence of their power, loſt in the aggrandizement of a few ſervile ruffians. France was a fair picture, rich in the moſt beautiful and variegated landſcape. The hand of the cruel ſpoiler hath deformed the whole, and nothing now is left but the outline. Like the variegated hues of a ſtagnant pool, that fair and extenſive proſpect ſhe preſents externally, conſiſts within of foul corruption, the very dregs of miſery, and ſeeds of death. Such are the effects of revolutions.

The controverſy about the Century has ſhifted its theatre to Norfolk in Virginia, where, as here, the abſurd notion of prematurely cloſing it, by cutting off twelve months from its period, is ſucceſsfully exploded. A friend of mine adduces an analogical argument, which would have weight, if it were wanted. He is writing an hiſtorical, philoſophical and political diſquiſition on the events of the preſent Century, and being engaged at preſent on the French bouleverſement, his ardent anxiety to enregiſter on its annals, the dengoûment of that bloody drama along with its commencement and progreſs, naturally encreaſes as he advances with his ſubject, and as the advance of the actors towards this deſireable iſſue, daily gives ſtronger and ſtronger hopes of its accompliſhment.

All ages, and all forms of government, have abounded in conſpiracies; and if theſe have ſometimes produced beneficial reſults, they have never been derived from the calculations of the conſpirators. But our own has been remarkably fertile in the production of conſpiracies of the worſt kind, carried on by the worſt agents, and promoted by the worſt of means,—ſo that it may juſtly be called the Age of Inſurrection; unhappily, it muſt be added, they have of late experienced a too uniform ſucceſs. Whether our our country is to be immolated on this ſanguinary altar, depends wholly on our timely and vigorous exertion. An exhibition of uncommon nerve can alone preſerve us from uncommon evils; that conſpiracy, once ripened and matured, our nerve and our energy will rivet ſtronger our chains.

We have read of empires, aſſailed and overthrown by conſpirators who ſprang up like muſhrooms in the night; fellows of yeſterday, unknown, unthought of. But leſt conus turn from what we read, to what we have ſeen. We have ſeen the firſt empire in the world ſhattered to a maſs of ruins, its forms deſtroyed, its inſtitutions reverſed, its language overrun with barbarous and jargonic terms, its manners debauched, its religion deſtroyed, its conſequence annihilated, and its very name rendered a loathſome reproach; have we not ſeen theſe things—have we not ſeen them brought about by a ſet of men contemptible in their origin, character, and at firſt in number, and do we, after all this, imagine ourſelves unaſſailable to the United Iriſhmen? Think you, the victims of St. Bartholomew's Day imagined, an hour before their fate, the terrible ſtroke which awaited them.

While, in the emphatic language of the Roman orator, many are found exclaiming of each of theſe murderers, "tamen hic vivit," others, ſunk in beſtial ſlothfulneſs and inanity, cry, "What a fuſs is making about the United Iriſhmen!" Who are they, what are they, where are they?" Aſtoniſhing nonſenſe! amazing infatuation! Deſperate, deſtructive, devoted ſtupidity! Becauſe your enemy is ſecret, cloſe and unfathomable; becauſe his deſigns are dark, and defy reſearch, do you doubt their tendency and power to harm you? Believe me, theſe conſpirators, while they are ſecret as the grave, will be found daring as death, when their plot ripens to exploſion.

What is an United Iriſhman? May not Iriſhmen unite as well as we? Look to Ireland for his character, and behold it written in blood! From the time of Earl Strongbow, the Iriſh have borne a character, our conceptions of which it is hard to find words to do juſtice to. From being almoſt the ſole depoſitaries of ſcience, the maſs has degenerated into the moſt brutal ignorance, whilſt from that extremity of oppoſition in their character, which diſtinguiſhes them in a peculiar manner from all the reſt of the world, their Iſle has contributed beyond her proportion, in men of eminence, as ſoldiers, poets, orators, ſtateſmen and divines. An Iriſh gentleman is one of the fineſt characters in nature. The reſt of the nation is repreſented by the bulk of thoſe who come to this country—ſuch men as Burke, Lyon, Reynolds, old Findley, Smiley and Duane, the bare mention of whom is ſufficient, without the trouble of elucidation.

Imagine a whole nation of ſuch men as theſe, and figure to yourſelves a congregation of every noxious, every venomous propenſity.

Behold their deeds, and behold deeds worthy ſuch authors. Wild, and untameable, they wage inceſſant war with one another, and Ireland has been a Golgotha from the earlieſt period of hiſtory. But her bloody bands of United Iriſhmen have exceeded in the atrocity of their maſſacres even the horrors of the Druidical rites, and abſolutely cut throats, like Shakeſpeare's Hotſpur for diverſion. Thus much for their character at home. This character has driven them thence. Are they then of a different caſt here? No: cælum non animum mutant. By carnage and plunder they ſubſiſted there: in maſſacre and ravage they can alone be happy here.

"Nomenque erit indelebile veſtrum"

The various affiliated Societies of United Iriſhmen in this country, form one intimate, cloſely connected band—the whole being only ſo many ramifications of the mother ſociety, the ſuperintending guidance of which they are directed, and with which they keep up a conſtant correſpondence as well as with each other. Thus, it is evident, the gang in America is altogether ſubordinate to that of Ireland: Its views, it appears, are equally ſo.

The ſcheme, in its rude outline, is to bring on a revolutionary ſtate in America, which by diſorganiſing all the plans of commerce and trade, might diminiſh the means of Great Britain for cruſhing the Inſurrection in Ireland. They had nevertheleſs marked the ramifications of a revolutionary form, which was to have been inſtituted in order the better to prolong thoſe diſorders which it was their firſt object to excite. They coaleſced with the Jacobins (moſt of the leaders of whom have actually been admitted within the pale of the ſociety) ſo far as regarded the ſtalking-horſe, behind the ſanction of whoſe philoſophical fame, all this miſchief was to be brewed. He is the focus whence emanate all their deep laid deſigns. He is now (though a ſalary man) abſenting himſelf from that poſt which he fills and defies, to forward the plans of his myrmidons by writing inflammatory reſolutions againſt the Alien and Sedition Bills, and ſtirring up the people to inſurrection. This tall, awkward figure (I do not mean the noted tory and man of laurel) imagines, that under the ſemblance of philoſophical retirement, he ſufficiently cloaks thoſe daring machinations, which will nevertheleſs drag him one day, a trembling criminal to the bar of juſtice.—Imitating a certain fooliſh bird, he runs his head into Helvetius, and imagines himſelf concealed, becauſe he does not ſee that he is ſeen.

Having uſed this great man 'till their purpoſes had been ſufficiently advanced, he would have been laid on the ſhelf, or perhaps decently interred. He would have given way to men of greater daring—ſtronger nerve—better qualified to ſail on the tempeſtuous ſea of liberty." Reynolds would ſucceed to the Directorſhip—for a Talleyrand, in body as well as mind, we need not look beyond his moſt impudent and meddleſome aſſociate.

To further theſe ends, every member, on initiation into the ſociety, pays into the general fund 1 guinea, which contribution is annually continued, and encreaſed by requiſitions, as occaſion calls.

A permanent committee of correſpondence has exiſted for three years, with the executive directory of France, and another with the revolters Ireland. With both, conſtant intercourſes and communication is

Do I hear ſome one cry, "Name them! Name them!" Lend me your patience and I will. Doubt not that they exiſt—for they are identified by unqueſtionable evidence—that of an United Iriſhman! Whoſo doubts the exiſtence of a directorial body, is a fool. Do you not ſee that they poſſeſs all the qualities of a body? do they not ſee? do they not read, do they not hear, do they not feel? or how is it that the fears we have excited have repreſſed their daring, and ſuſpended their appeal to the populace? "Conſul vidit."

Let not the inhabitants of other towns ſuppoſe, that they are free from the machinations of United Iriſhmen, becauſe Philadelphia is the centre of their operations.

In Baltimore there is a band called the "Republican company," compoſed to a man of United Iriſhmen; theſe, with the whole numerous body there, voted for the Muddy-headed General, that ſworn enemy to France, that foe to her ſchemes, that "oppoſer of her power." Their uniform is completely French, and that their principles are ſo, will be doubted by no man who knows the real character of their political leader.

In ſhort, their poiſon runs in every artery of our political body,—it is diffuſed over all the minuteſt fibres of our frame. PUBLICITY to their machinations, is the attempted remedy. Here I ſtand in need of active cooperation. If other people do not chooſe to adopt my homely and untutored ſtyle, let them utter the facts I bring to light in their own dreſs, or any other—at all events give them publicity. They ſhould have a diſſemination as wide as the extent of the evil. It is anſwering but a partial purpoſe that I preſent them to the view of thirteen hundred people, when they ſhould meet the eyes of thrice as many thouſands.

The touching letter of Sir Francis D'Ivernois, ſo promptly republiſhed by Mr. Brown, it will be obſerved, cannot find a place in either of the three morning Jacobin prints. As to old Jaſper, and his partners the Newgate Man, Dr. Morpheus and the United Iriſhman Doctor, we do not look for any thing to them, but from the two True Americans, habit has led us to expect ſomething. I believe in my ſoul, it is habit only. The whole three are alike True Americans; and you might as well expect to ſee this letter ſhone upon by the malign ſtar of ſurgo ut proſim, as expect to find it under the protection of the two True Americans. No, no, they will never ſhake hands over it—they know their cue—they never meddle in party politics—they are true Americans. Beſhrew me, but it is a pity the political health ſhould be corroded by ſuch cankered ſubſtances.

Mr. HARPER's pumphlet on the diſpute between the United States and France, has been tranſlated into the French and German languages, and an Edition of it publiſhed in Saxony.

List of UNITED IRISHMEN.

On this ſubject, it will be remembered, I requeſted communications. Thoſe I have received being far from complete, it is almoſt uſeleſs to make a publication of them: Indeed, why ſhould I publiſh a dozen of names, when the members amount by their own eſtimation, to FORTY THOUSAND effective men?

I ſay, why ſhould I inſert in my paper, the names of Samuel Wiley, Teacher in the College.

Or what end can it anſwer, but that of inducing diſcoveries, or at leaſt attempts to extend our preſent ſtock of information, reſpecting the number of diſaffected Iriſh in America?

The Democratic ſociety of New-York, are ſummoned, by one Davis, (probably not the Bank of Pennſylvania-man) to meet at the den of a fellow whom they call citizen Snow. At this meeting "ſome communications of importance are to be made." It is a pity the arm of juſtice is too feeble to communicate a halter to them.

The ſeſſion of Congreſs has opened with the uſual ſymptoms of diſcord. Nicholas leads the van, and Gallatin conducts the main force of oppoſition. The Virginian has boldly thrown the gauntlet of defiance, and told us plainly his hardy purpoſe, of aiming a deadly blow at ſome recent laws on which at this critical moment, the ſafety of the United States depends. The crafty Genevan purſues ſteadily the ſame courſe, but with greater circumſpection. The one is the very image of Carrier, the other the twin brother of the apoſtate and hypocrite Talleyrand Perigord.

But not effecting his deſign from ſome cauſe with the above inſtrument, left the houſe, with the knife on the table ſtreaming with his blood: firſt ſtabbing himſelf with the ſame in the body, from hence he haſtened to the well and plunged himſelf headlong—The partner of his bed ſoon miſſed her conſort, aroſe and diſcovered the ſanguiſluous weapon, on which alarmed ſhe awakened the family, who after a ſhort ſearch found him in the pit which his own hands had digged, from which he a wretched ſpectacle was in a few moments drawn out dead. We have not a Thermometer in our Office to tell with exactneſs the extreme cold of the weather, or to what degree the mercury ſinks within the Tube—but from its action on our own bodies we venture to affirm, for the ſeaſon of the year we never felt the atmoſphere more condenſed or piercing.—The roads are already ſhod with a fine ſnow, and our friends in the country have a good chance, to tranſport their produce to market.

CONGRESS.

In the Houſe of Repreſentatives of the United States, a meſſage was received from the Senate, informing, that the Senate were about to proceed to the trial of the impeachment of William Blount; when, having paſſed a reſolution for the inſtruction of the Committee of Managers, the Houſe adjourned.

In Senate, having formed into a court for the trial of William Blount, leave was granted to Meſſrs. Ingerſoll and Dallas, counſel for the defendant, to appear and plead for him.

At 12 o'clock, the managers of the impeachment on the part of the Houſe of Repreſentatives appeared and took their ſeats in the Senate. The honorable Mr. Lawrence then read the articles of impeachment, the proceſs ſerved, and the returns thereof. Mr. Harper, in behalf of the committee of managers, requeſted that a diſtant day might be aſſigned for the commencement of the trial, in order to give the committee an opportunity of obtaining the opinion of the houſe of repreſentatives on the circumſtance of the defendant being tried by counſel. Whereupon Monday at 12 o'clock was aſſigned.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

The following Reſolution was adopted in the Houſe of Repreſentatives of this ſtate.

ANSWER,

Of the HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES,

To the GOVERNOR'S SPEECH.

SIR,

THE diſtreſs, which the Citizens of Philadelphia and its ſuburbs have experienced during the prevalence of the late contagious fever, has excited general ſympathy.

To alleviate the injuries already ſuſtained, and to prevent (as far as human agency is capable) the return of a malady ſo fatal to the lives of our fellow-citizens, and ſo injurious to the reputation of our climate and proſperity of the State, are ſubjects which merit, and will receive, an early conſideration.

Being aware that a procraſtination of the Wyoming controverſy increaſes the difficulties to be overcome, and that the intereſt of the State, requires its ſettlement, our utmoſt exertions will be uſed to bring it to a ſatisfactory concluſion.

In all our deliberations upon the other important matters contained in your addreſs, we ſhall carefully keep in view "the public good" as paramount to every other conſideration—and ſhall cheerfully concur in the adoption of any meaſures which may promote an union among our citizens, by guarding our country againſt the deſtructive effects of foreign influence.

The aſpect which the ſtate of our national affairs has aſſumed, in relation to the French Republic, has certainly excited univerſal attention, and may, incidentally, affect the courſe of our deliberations.

Finding that the honorable overtures which were made by the Federal Government, to reſtore harmony with France, were treated with the moſt ſtudied inſult and contempt, and that our meſſengers of peace (fully empowered, as well to receive explanations and reparations for the wilful violation of our rights, and the plunder of our property, as to grant compenſation, if injury had been inadvertently done) were not even admitted to an audience, becauſe they would not conſent to ſurrender our National Independence, we feel inexpreſſible ſatisfaction with the conduct of the General Covernment in repelling the arrogance of that power, and, with a ſteady firmneſs, maintaining the honor and rights of our country; and it is with peculiar pleaſure we behold the unanimity of the people, and their fixed reſolution to ſupport, at all hazards, their rights and independence.—

As this will probably be the laſt opportunity we ſhall have, permit us, previouſly to your leaving the high office you now hold, to expreſs our approbation of the care you have manifeſted for the public welfare; and to wiſh you health and happineſs in your retirement.
